SENATOR J. B. FORAKER.

Gen. W. T. Sherman First Nominated Him for President.

Editor National Tribune: Without any attempt to detract from the credit given to the Ohio League of Republican Clubs for their enthusiastic indorsement of Senator J. B. Joseph Benson Foraker was destined to fill the highest office in the gift of a free people.

In his own dramatic and forceful way Gen. Sherman made clear his views along this line, in a speech he delivered in Music Hall, Cincinnati, at the 22d meeting of the Army of the Tennessee, Sept. 25, 1889. It was remarkable that very nearly 20 years after the dramatic presentation of Foraker's name the very nearly 20 years after the dramatic presentation of Foraker's name the American people should be so earnestly considering his candidacy, and it is also remarkable that Foraker's name comes at a time which makes him the last hope for a President from among the ranks of the soldiers of the war of the rebellion. If Foraker is not nominated and elected President next year the last of the veterans of the civil war who are available for this great distinction will have passed the limit of years by the time the successful man shall have Noble Prentis was a man of small stature, and the story goes that at the beginning of the civil war, when he sought to enlist as a soldier. us body and soul.

"Well do I remember you, my young friend or boy, as you came thru the pine woods that day in North Carolina, your horse covered with lather like a soldier knight, and reported to me the message from your General, Slocum. Now, my friends, there is nothing in life more beautiful than the soldier. A knight errant with steel casque, lance in hand, has always commanded the adnumber of leaves, leaving a hole as into the service, and the country was an established and mustered into the weather. The minimum hight required by Army Regulations, and was ordered to step aside by the recruiting officer. Mr. Prentist did so reluctantly, muttering as he went, "I suppose I'll have to let my country go to — because I'm not eight feet tall." The recruiting officer overheard the remark and called him back, saying. "Young man, you'll do," and Prentis was enlisted and mustered into the service, and the country was with the Norwegian Legation in Washington since 1901. He was born in Christiania April 3, 1862.

His diplomatic career began in 1889, when he served as Attache of the Legation in London. Paris and Berlin, until Feb. 1, 1893. He was then transferred to Stockholm, later serving as Acting Secretary of Legation at Paris, Copenhagen Berlin and St Petersburg.

Treated Without Cutling or Drugging.

That the eyescan be strengthened so that eyes lasses can be dispensed with in many cases has been proven beyond a doubt by the testimony of hundreds of people who publicly claim that their eyes light has teen restored by that wonderful little instrument called "Actima." "Actima" also relieves sora and granulated lids, fridis, etc., and removes Cataracts without cutting or drugging. Over 75,000 "Actima" have been sold, therefore "Actima" is not an experiment, but a reliable method of treatment.
